October 15, 16, 17th.

2010, at the Tampa Airport Marriott Hotel
Tampa, Florida. U.S.A.

Our Convention is all about having fun, winning lots of prizes and enjoying great company. We eat well, play well and relax well. Many of the Conventioneers come back year after year—so you know it has to be good fun! We will be running another ‘Sock Animal’ workshop this year and there will be the usual auction and other fun activities and prize winning events.

Package A—for those that are able to attend,

Package B—for those who want to participate as a Conventioneer but cannot travel to the event

Package C—for those of you who would like to receive the ‘Goodie bag’ and all the fun gifts that go in it.

We are again returning to the Marriot (Airport) Hotel (with it’s revolving rooftop restaurant) because everyone has loved that location . The staff, accommodation and food are all excellent. Conventioneers arrive at Tampa airport, and ride the escalator to the hotel foyer. This means no extra time travelling or cab fares and you can relax in the hotel with friends prior to your return flight.

The theme for this years event is

‘Things that Go Bump in the Night’

which means there will be lots of Halloween monsters as well as bears, mice and dragons etc...

Each of the Convention pieces and prizes will be related to the theme.

Since so many guests arrive before the convention begins, we are going to organize an event during the day on Friday prior to the Friday evening registration. The cost of this will be separate to the convention events.

`Gabbi and George` are traditional little English Gollies. When I was young I had a `golly`. They derived from India during the colonial days and have a very interesting history. In America they rose to fame after the stories of `Florence Upton` but were not a common toy in American nurseries. Today they are often considered the protector of the teddy bear. I especially liked their characters in children`s books where they were often naughty but always the hero.
